To achieve maximum results, wastage of resources, time and cost that to be avoided.

Development administration has to co-ordinate the activities of development agencies and organisations to integrate their efforts and energies for the realisation of development goals. This would also save the administration from the problems of duplication of functions, neglect of important functions and unnecessary focus on irrelevant or marginally relevant activities. It would thus minimise administrative lag.

NEED OF CO-ORDINATION
Since development implies increasing specialisation and professionalisation, the number of agencies and organisations involved in development tasks has considerably gone up. In order to have the maximum benefit of this emergent administrative system, co-ordination between various administrative units and activities is essential.

- Ecological Perspective

It is not a closed system. It receives a feedback from the social system and responds to the demands put on it by the system.

The changes in administration affect its environment and changes in environment also have its bearing on administration.

The environment sets forth the operative parameters of development administration. It requires the qualities of flexibility and responsiveness in administrative actions and methods.

In a way, development administration is related to the environment and involves close interaction between the administration and environment.
