SOCIAL INTERACTION & LANGUAGE

• Ethnography of Communication:

This pulls apart speech events into their component parts. In a speech situation, cultures have developed conventions governing interactions. It can look at the sequencing of a conversation, jargon and openings & closings of conversations (p. 516).

• Solidarity and Power:

Speakers express closeness or shared status through solidarity. They may also maintain differences and identify social standings of participants through the power relationship. Solidarity and power relationships often show themselves through address terms (i.e. "Do the participants use reciprocal name calling such as friends who call themselves by their first name, or does one participant call the other 'sir'?").
